

Dear Chairman Powell,

As a journalist for print media, I am very concerned about the media deregulation proposal your commission will vote on next week. The bottom line is this: more public voices equals more democracy. If a handful of conglomerates own the vast number of information sources in this country, democracy is inevitably stifled. Please don't succumb to the pressure of big business. You are representing the people, not the select few who stand to benefit from this proposal.

Sincerely,

Matthew Green
